The Pentagon Library serves as the corporate/headquarters library for the Department of Defense. Its primary mission is to serve the daily research and information requirements of policy makers and their staff within the Department of Defense, primarily in the Pentagon. Though we cannot provide in-depth research to individuals outside of our primary customer base, we will give brief answers or citations to appropriate sources, as time allows. In reviewing the questions we have been receiving, we have noticed that the vast majority can be answered by using the web sites listed under "Web References" especially those about military regulations. If you can not find what you are looking for at any of those sites, please fill out the form to send an email to our Reference Librarians.
Please complete all elements of the form and click the submit button below.

Online Publications and Forms let you link directly to current online reports and documents from the providers.

Area II. Web References

This area is a collection of web links. It is identified and evaluated by librarians based on the research mission conducted by the Pentagon. Each of the entries is discussed below.

Military Sites has details on military history, music, installations, insignia, reading list, and related reference information.

Search Engines gives you access to the most useful commercial search tools. It is organized by its functionality. The information on how to evaluate web contents is also available from here.

Reference by topics offer information by classified subjects.

General References links to the online directories, dictionaries, encyclopedias, maps, weather and employment, etc.

News Online links the online newspapers as well as historical archives.

Area III. Resource Guides

Resource Guides
Frequently Asked Questions, Bibliographies, Database Training, Help on Law, Pathfinders, MPALinks, Speechwriters' Toolbox

Under the Resource Guides, library staff have prepared and compiled a list of ready references from both internal and external sources based on frequently studied topics. It gives you a short cut and also saves you time as you conduct research on these topics. For directions for accessing commercial online resources subscribed to by the library, check out the tutorials under database training.
